Etruscan Press, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Serious and witty, mystical and dark, these short stories by Meg Pokrass are small windows into another world, a world that is almost this one--but not quite. In her masterful pieces, Pokrass leads her readers on, page by page, enticing them with her beautiful and dream-like language. Bopping and slamming through these little stories like some genius world tour of the human heart, Pokrass gets a lot done in the shortest spaces imaginable. This collection of tiny, intimate truffles is as powerful as soul-chocolate infused with caffeine. Each of these 50 stories contains bite-sized glimpses into the lives of everyday people, leaving the reader with the long and lasting effects of a full-length novel. Each chapter delves into relevant life events that require further contemplation. Her language is supercharged and witty, with humor and sadness in approximately equal amounts, revealing the dark truth and reality of the world. The people in these stories need Meg Pokrass. Their lives are tough but her imagination is the fire-lasso that can save them, save us. In her work, off-kilter is the same as clear-eyed focus. Here, strange and normal go hand-in-hand, a marriage that explains nothing but makes so much clear. Time after time, these little stories read big. --Bob Hicok, author of Elegy Owed With The Dog Looks Happy Upside Down, Flash Fiction comes of age. -- Bill Roorbach, author of The Remedy for Love and Life Among Giants Supercharged and witty, with humor and sadness in approximately equal amounts-- Bobbie Ann Mason, author of Shiloh and Other Stories These sexy but wistful prose poems hint at entire constellations of affections, relationships at once sweet, sad, satisfying--and not. --Molly Peacock, author of The Second Blush Pokrass writes books you want on your nightstand to read...
